What does the school need to do to improve further?

- Make sure that the planning and activities being considered for the new curriculum include an even stronger focus on mathematical problem solving.
Inspection judgements

The achievement of pupils is outstanding

Children join the school with knowledge, skills and understanding that are typically seen in children of the same age. They make very good progress in Reception so standards are high by the time they start Year 1.

Very rapid progress in reading, writing and mathematics is evident across the school. By the end of Year 2 pupils are, on average, well ahead of pupils of the same age nationally. By the end of Year 5, nearly all are working at the level expected of pupils a year older and more than a third are already exceeding the levels expected of older pupils in writing and mathematics. In reading, more than half of the pupils are already working at these higher levels when they leave.

Pupils of all abilities, including the more-able pupils, make outstanding progress at the school and lessons routinely cater exceptionally well for different ability groups. Those who are struggling are quickly spotted and often provided with short-term individual support to successfully overcome their particular problem or misconception.

Disabled pupils and those who have special educational needs make at least as much progress as other pupils. Those with special educational needs are identified early and very effective help is provided by school staff, calling in support from outside specialists where necessary. As a result, many of these pupils have overcome their difficulties by the time they leave the school.

The very few pupils eligible for support through the pupil premium also make outstanding progress and achieve as well as other pupils.

Pupils love books and read fluently and with great confidence and enjoyment. Pupils hone their reading skills everyday as part of their work in other subjects.

Teachers promote a real desire to write. This starts early in the Reception Class where nearly half the class were able to write a legible letter to the pirate who had kidnapped their beloved class bear. By the time pupils reach Year 5 they are writing lengthy, highly imaginative or informative texts either on laptops or in beautifully presented handwriting.

Pupils reach high standards in music, both in singing and in playing musical instruments. Every pupil learns to play a wind instrument during their time at the school and pupils sing on a daily basis.

The quality of teaching is outstanding

Teachers and pupils are equally enthusiastic to start learning at the beginning of each session. Lessons start very promptly and pupils relish the tasks and problems they are presented with. Rather than needing to remind pupils to keep on working hard, more often pupils need reminding to stop working so that they can go out to play or eat lunch.

Teachers plan lessons very thoroughly to ensure they always include a mix of tasks for pupils of different abilities. Once the learning tasks are clear, teachers and other adults circulate the classroom to provide words of encouragement, to offer support or to ask a question which adds a further challenge to the work they have planned.
Teachers have an excellent understanding of the skills and knowledge they wish pupils to learn. They have very high expectations of what their pupils will achieve and pupils delight in living up to these. Teachers frequently display pupils’ completed work to show exactly how much they have achieved by the end of sessions and to guide and encourage others to reach the same high standards.

The topics which pupils study provide excellent opportunities for them to rapidly develop their skills in reading and writing. Opportunities to hone their mathematical skills within their topics are not quite as well developed. As a result, teachers have identified this as a focus for improvement in the lesson plans they are developing for the new National Curriculum.

All pupils are encouraged and supported to acquire a very good standard of reading and writing, including spelling, punctuation and legible handwriting.

Teachers set and mark homework very regularly which pupils enjoy completing. Almost all parents feel this is appropriate for their children. Pupils also regularly write class ‘blogs’ for the school website which share their learning with a wider audience.

The behaviour and safety of pupils are outstanding

The behaviour of pupils is outstanding, in lessons and around the school. Pupils arrive to school and lessons very punctually, eager to learn. Older pupils often become so engrossed in their work they need reminding to stop for playtime or lunch. Their outstanding attitudes to learning are a significant factor in the very high standards they reach and the rapid progress they make.

Outside of lessons, pupils play happily together with minimal supervision in the very well equipped outdoor play areas. Similarly pupils behave very well in the dining hall. There are few incidents of poor behaviour and exclusions are extremely rare.

Pupils are extremely courteous and considerate of others. They welcome visitors warmly and show great respect for their teachers and other adults.

Attendance is high because pupils are very keen to attend school. Any unexplained absences are followed up very promptly, and on occasions the school works with individual families to help resolve any difficulties which prevent regular attendance.

The school’s work to keep pupils safe and secure is outstanding. Pupils say that feel very safe at school and are exceptionally clear on how to keep themselves safe. They understand different types of bullying but are adamant that bullying does not occur in their school. Any concerns are quickly dealt with by adults. A high priority is given to staying safe online and regular awareness-raising activities take place with staff, pupils and parents.

The school has very good systems in place to make sure that safeguarding requirements are met, including checks on adults who work with pupils.

The leadership and management are outstanding

Outstanding leadership from the headteacher and governing body has led to the ongoing improvement of this school. Keeping a close check on the progress of pupils, which was a key area for improvement at the previous inspection, is now exemplary.
Checks on teaching quality are rigorous and are carried out very regularly by the headteacher. This has played a crucial role in making sure that the quality of teaching is outstanding despite staff changes. Teachers are regularly moved to different year groups to ensure that their expectations remain high.

Team work is at the heart of this school. All teachers take responsibility for particular subjects and carry out a similar cycle of planning, checking and reviewing progress. They regularly present their findings to the Governing Body and are often called on to share their expertise more widely with other local schools, particularly those in the local Teaching School Alliance.

Pupils really enjoy the wide variety of opportunities they have in lessons and before and after the school day. Topics such as ‘Pirates’ and ‘Natural Disasters’ engage their interest right from the start. Their interest and understanding is deepened by opportunities they have to learn outside the classroom and through relevant trips and residential visits.

Pupils enjoy a wide range of competitive sports. This has been supported through the carefully targeted use of the extra funding for sport. This funding has also been used to increase the number and range of school sports clubs. As a result, over half of the pupils now attend a sports club and the biggest increase has been amongst girls.

School life is guided by a set of common values which pupils understand and respect. Work in class and assemblies provide outstanding opportunities for them to consider spiritual, moral, social and cultural issues. Staff ensure there is no discrimination and all pupils are treated fairly.

The local authority is very well aware of the strengths of this outstanding school. Local authority staff visit occasionally to double-check the school’s systems and performance. The headteacher is a local leader of education and supports new headteachers in the local authority.

The governance of the school:
- There has been a marked improvement in governance since the previous inspection. Governors now have a code of conduct to guide them and visit the school regularly. These visits, along with regular reports from teachers, helps keep them aware of what is happening in the classroom. They have been trained to interpret performance statistics, so are clear about where the school does exceptionally well in relation to other schools as well as helping them see where improvements could still be made. Governors review the performance of the headteacher from this informed position. They also check that the reviews of teachers’ performance are helping them to improve and are closely linked to pay awards. They are absolutely clear that the quality of teaching is the most important factor in ensuring that all pupils do as well as they can. They rigorously oversee the school’s finances to ensure that spending has an excellent impact on the progress and well-being of the pupils, including those who are eligible for the pupil premium.
