Summary of key findings for parents

This provision is good

- Management monitors the observation and assessments staff make and how they are used to shape the learning experiences for children. Staff recognise that children have different learning styles and plan for their individuality. Children make good progress.

- Children are very happy and settled at the nursery. They learn important skills, such as taking turns and sharing, and show politeness and consideration to each other.

- Staff work well with parents, sharing information about all aspects of children's time at the nursery. This helps to support continuity in children's care and learning.

- Children have good opportunities to learn about healthy lifestyles. For example, they learn why and how it is important to wash their hands after they have done a glitter activity.

- Support for children who have special educational needs is good. Management demonstrates a strong commitment to working with parents and early years professionals, and timely interventions enable children to achieve their potential.

It is not yet outstanding because:

- Staff do not build effectively on opportunities to extend on children's spontaneous ideas and interests as they play and learn.

- Play areas are not organised so children, particularly those who prefer to learn outdoors, can make independent choices in their play.
What the setting needs to do to improve further

To further improve the quality of the early years provision the provider should:

- make greater use of opportunities that spontaneously arise to extend children's ideas and learning further
- find ways to organise some play areas so all children, especially those who prefer to learn outdoors, can make independent choices in their play to challenge learning further.

Inspection findings

Effectiveness of the leadership and management is good

Management is ambitious and has high expectations of all staff. The manager uses self-evaluation effectively to continually improve the provision and target areas for further development. Staff are well supported to further extend their professional development through high-quality training. This contributes effectively to improving outcomes for children. Safeguarding is effective. Staff know the procedures to follow to protect children and to report allegations and concerns relating to staff practice. Staff carry out risk assessments to help minimise hazards to children indoors and outdoors.

Quality of teaching, learning and assessment is good

Staff provide good opportunities for young children to develop their communication and language development. For example, they model language as young children build with soft bricks. Staff build on children's eagerness to explore with their senses. For example, young children are keen to explore textures in wet and dry sand. Staff provide children with interesting activities that capture their imaginations. For example, children enjoy being creative as they make cards and calendars for Christmas. Lively discussions about children's experience of a birthday party show they are confident to share home events. Staff provide good opportunities for children to develop their literacy skills. For example, children confidently identify and write letters in their name. Children listen attentively to stories and enjoy looking at books independently.

Personal development, behaviour and welfare are good

Children are happy and settle well into the nursery. Babies benefit from the strong and trusting relationships with key persons, which help them to feel safe and settled. Staff provide good opportunities for children to develop an understanding of similarities and differences between themselves and others. For example, family photographs are displayed and children confidently name family members. All children benefit from regular opportunities to play outdoors. Children enjoy the activities provided and confidently steer ride-on toys and tricycles. Children learn about safety and risks in their play. They recognise why some things may be dangerous as staff give clear explanations.

Outcomes for children are good

All children make good progress in their learning. They are highly motivated and eager to join in. For instance, children enjoy learning new songs for the Christmas Nativity and listen intently to the sounds of musical instruments. Younger children grow in confidence and develop good independence skills. For example, as they quickly learn how to put on coats and shoes to go outside to play. Children use numbers and count frequently in their play, for example older children count candles on pretend cakes. Children are well prepared for the next stage in their learning including school.
